Free Medical Treatment

REPORT 2022

Wellness for All Reaching Remote Corners with Compassion

PROJECT OVERVIEW

What we did

The project aims to enhance healthcare access for deprived individuals. Therefore, we organize monthly 'Free Medical Treatment' campaigns in remote areas of Bangladesh where no medical facilities are available. An internal medicine doctor offers diverse medical treatments, including checkups for families, specialized screenings for diabetes and blood pressure for the elderly, physical therapy, advice on arthritis and back pain, immunizations, medications, and referrals to specialist doctors in cases of severe illness. Additionally, we strive to raise health awareness among people.

silence, with some problems even leading to fatal outcomes. Additionally, pregnant women from remote areas lack access to regular health checkups, resulting in childbirth complications. Given these circumstances, Projects For Humanity strives to assist these underserved individuals in improving their quality of life.

Why we did it

According to the International Journal for Equity in Health, 15% of the people in Bangladesh do not receive medical treatment. The World Health Organization (WHO) reports that health services are concentrated in urban areas, despite 70% of the population living in rural regions. Consequently, access to healthcare is limited in rural areas. We firmly believe that receiving treatment is a human right; thus, we provide free treatment in rural areas.

Furthermore, numerous women in remote areas endure various reproductive health-related diseases annually. Sadly, they struggle to voice their issues and lack opportunities to consult doctors for treatment. Consequently, they endure pain in

Where we did it

We conduct monthly free medical treatment campaigns in Kurigram, Cumilla, Chapainawabganj, Barishal, and Jhenaidah, Bangladesh.

PROJECT OVERVIEW

January to December, 2022

We carried out this project throughout the entire year.

In the past 12 months, a total of 72 free medical campaigns were conducted, benefiting more than 5000 individuals.

“Mariyam Begum (pseudonym)”

I couldn't eat the food my son prepared properly due to my tendency to vomit. Consequently, I grew weaker day by day and became immobilized. Additionally, I was grappling with high blood pressure, further exacerbated by a lack of medication.

My son's income is meager, making it impossible to afford a doctor's visit. A local boy from our village took me to a doctor eight months ago, leading to a noticeable improvement in my condition. I can now eat without complications, bringing me immense relief. Moreover, the doctor provided me with medication for my blood pressure. Projects For Humanity has greatly benefited individuals like me.

Accomplishment

In 2022, our campaign made significant strides. Over 5000 individuals benefited from our free treatment initiatives, while health awareness efforts reached around 7000 individuals. Notably, the campaign observed a rising influx of female patients seeking care. It's worth highlighting that numerous individuals grappling with chronic illnesses, who had been unable to access medical care for an extended period, have experienced recovery through consistent treatment provided by our free medical campaign. This accomplishment stands as a truly remarkable achievement for us.

TESTIMONIAL

Women get the opportunity to discuss their concerns with a female doctor more comfortably.

Khadiza Khatun (pseudonym)

After the birth of my two children, I endured reproductive health problems for three years. However, I confided in no one except my husband. He was aware of my situation but did not take me to a doctor. When I learned that a female doctor had arrived in our village offering free treatment, I promptly sought her help for my issue. She attentively examined me and provided advice along with medications. I'm immensely relieved that her recommendations have genuinely improved my condition. I am profoundly grateful to Projects For Humanity.
